

The proposal to expand one-way broadcasting in the Amateur radio service is not in the best interest of Amateur radio. Current regulations allow too much one-way broadcasting in the Amateur Radio Service. Currently numerous stations are conducting one-way broadcasting to promote religious or political ideology.

The purpose of Amateur Radio is to conduct two way transmissions between stations however US Amateur radio stations and clubs are converting the HF spectrum into a one-way broadcasting service. Currently with the Internet it is better that people that wish to have broadcasts use that medium to reach a world-wide audience.

The further expansion of Amateur Radio into a one-way broadcasting service only serves a few and is not the purpose or intent of the Service.
